1. Carlos M. RECIO^{1,2} was born on 6 Jul 1849 in Puerto Principe, Cuba.¹⁻³ He immigrated in 1872 to Key West, FL. Arrival: in 1872.¹ He lived in Key West, Monroe, Florida, United States in 1880.² He lived in Key West, Monroe, Florida in 1900.¹ He died on 22 Mar 1910 in Key West, Monroe Co, FL.³ 1880 Census - Wife Emilina, Son Charles E., Occupation - Grocery Merchant
1900 Census - Monroe, ED#97, 2/23.

Carlos Recio was born July 6, 1849, in Puerto Principe, Cuba. . In 1872, shortly after reaching his majority, Mr. Recio came to Key West, FL. When he arrived he was a poor boy, without friends, his total capital not exceeding one hundred dollars. But he had what was better than money, a burning ambition to make his way in the world and the energy and industry which always ensure success. His first venture was as clerk in a grocery store, a position he retained until 1875. In that year he branched out for himself, embarking in a wholesale and retail grocery business. In 1876 Mr. Recio decided to abandon the retail branch of the business and devoted himself exclusively to the wholesale trade. On June 5, 1879, Mr. Recio was married to Miss Emeline Corral, who was born in Havana, Cuba, September 6, 1862, and came to Key West with her parents in 1869. Carlos met with continued success and was recognized as one of the leading merchants and most substantial business men of Key West. He had built the largest wholesale/retail grocery store on the island. In official life he served as a member of the Monroe county board of commissioners for four years. His fraternal connections were with the Masonic order and Oddfellows and he was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal church. Carlos and Emeline had six sons and three daughters. The family was one of the best known and most popular in Key West.

A close friend of Cuban revolutionary Jose Marti, Carlos Recio did much to help the Cuban freedom effort, including smuggling supplies to revolutionists on merchant ships. Key West played an important role in protecting and perpetuating the Cuban separatist ideal during these years; an effort that by the mid-1880s had earned it a reputation as the primary rebel center in the United States. Indeed, on coming to Key West for the first time in 1884, the rebel chieftain Maximo Gomez noted in his diary, "we arrived in Key West . . . where the best of the Cuban emigre centers exists." By the end of the decade, Jose Marti also recognized the importance of the Key, and the newly-established community in Tampa, and based his rise to prominence on this constituency....

...Revolutionary concerns again gained prominence in the colony when Dr. Eusebio Hernandez, collaborating closely with Gomez and Maceo, arrived in Key West in early January 1885, hoping to raise at least $20,000. He and Gomez had estimated that $55,000 would be needed for the first expedition, and in considering quotas for the various centers, it was thought that only Panama could produce the equal of Key West. The other proposed fundraising locations were Philadelphia, New Orleans, and Kingston (Jamaica), each estimated to produce $3,000; Santo Domingo, $1,000; and New York, $5,000. Key West became the primary locale for raising needed financial resources.

On arriving, Hernandez obtained the active cooperation of Lamadriz and Poyo, and the three initiated their rounds of the cigar factories. Cigar manufacturers Gate, Cayetano Sorta, Francisco Marrero, Enrique Canals, and Carlos Recio one of the most prosperous merchants on the isle, offered to loan the revolution $30,000....."

In 1895 Carlos purchased the property now known as The Conch House. It was his daughter, Herminia, who made the Conch House her home, along with her four children and husband Lance Lester, whose own family's history and influence in Key West dates back to the mid-1800's. Captain Joseph Lester of England settled here after following the sea for many years. Captain John Whalton, another Lester ancestor, established the first lightship at Carysfort Reef off Key Largo in 1826 and died there in an Indian ambush a decade later.

Lance Lester himself was the first graduate of Key West High School and the University of Florida Law School. He devoted his entire life to the service of Key West citizens, first as a respected lawyer, then as city and state attorney. The Monroe County Justice Building is named in his honor.

The Conch House is now owned by Carlos Recio's great-granddaughter, Francine Delaney Holland, and great-great-grandson, Sam Holland, Jr.

Between two well-known corner bars in Key West, Sloppy Joe's and the Bull and Whistle, one finds a melange of heirlooms, including the cast concrete former Island City Bank founded in 1905, exemplifying a Havana influence, also evident at the Bull, once Carlos Recio's Grocery. The Fogarty House at 227 is where in 1912 Key West's mayor, Dr. Jeremiah Fogarty, entertained Henry Flagler, President William Taft and dignitaries celebrating the historic railroads linking of the island to the mainland.

Miami Herald, The (FL) - October 29, 1985
Deceased Name: JOSEPHINE RAVLIN, WAS FIRST MISS CORAL GABLES

Josephine A. Ravlin knew what it was to be a "first." In the 1920s, she became the first Miss Coral Gables. She was one of only two employees when she went to work in the weather department of Pan American World Airways during the Depression.
"It was on-the-job training," said her daughter, Roxann Hart. "It was new to everyone at that time."
Mrs. Ravlin, a resident of the Coral Gables area since 1918, died Monday at the age of 80.
Though she had no formal education in the field, Mrs. Ravlin worked for five years as a weather forecaster for Pan Am at the old Dinner Key terminal.
"The government didn't have a weather department down here then," said her husband, J.E.
In 1926, Mrs. Ravlin was chosen the first Miss Coral Gables, a beauty contest in the Miss America competition.
"She was a very special person who always achieved what she was after," Hart said. "And did it with a flair."
Born in Key West, Mrs. Ravlin moved to Coral Gables when she was a teen-ager. She graduated from Miami Senior High School and Fairfax Hall Junior College in Virginia, where she studied liberal arts.
In her spare time, Mrs. Ravlin spent a good deal of her time fishing in the Florida Keys.
Active in various charities, Mrs. Ravlin was a member of the Coco Plum Women's Club, the Key Largo Anglers Club and the Coral Gables Country Club, as well as other organizations.
Besides her daughter and husband, survivors include one sister, Sophia Williams, and one grandson, John R. Hart.
Visitation will be from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday at the Philbrick Funeral Chapel, where services will be at 11 a.m. Thursday.
In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Women's Cancer Society, University of Miami Chapter.

Deceased Name: JOHN RAVLIN, DEVELOPED KEYS, DADE LAND

John Edward Ravlin, a Coral Gables developer, Realtor and oil explorer, died Monday. He was 89. Mr. Ravlin was born in Chicago in 1901 and moved to Miami in 1912 with his family, who raised citrus and tomatoes in South Dade.

Mr. Ravlin was a member of the first law class at the University of Miami. He left law school before graduation and pursued a variety of ventures.

He was a wildcatter in the oil business in Cuba, Denmark, Texas and the Florida Panhandle. He also worked on the Coral Gables Waterway in the 1930s.

"He pursued so many things," said daughter Roxann Ravlin Hart. "There wasn't anything this man couldn't do."

After his oil exploration days ended, he returned to Dade County and opened a realty office in South Miami.

He and his late brother Fred developed Jewfish Creek, Key Largo Sound Village and High Pines near South Miami.

He was a member of the Country Club of Coral Gables, a charter member of the Century Club, past member of the Ocean Reef Club and Key Largo Angler's Club.

He was married to the late Josephine A. Recio Ravlin. Mr. Ravlin is survived by his daughter, Roxann Hart, of Ocala; and a grandson, John Ravlin Hart.

Services are scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Thursday at Woodlawn Mausoleum Chapel, 3260 SW Eighth St. Visitation will be from 7 to 9 p.m. today at Van Orsdel Coral Gables Chapel, 4600 SW Eighth St.

Contributions can be made to the Woman's Cancer Association, Franklin C. Bush Chapter, 5500 SW 85th St., Miami, Fla. 33143.
